Campers leave with high self-esteem, the result of mastering new skills and overcoming challenges. Campers return home with the confidence that they can meet new challenges, build new skills, and make new friends. But, most importantly, Camp Chandler Tonsmeire is a place where kids can be kids again.

FAMILY BUILDING LIFE SKILLS OF COMMUNICATION CONFLICT MANAGEMENT

Cooperative games help families to develop the essential skills of cooperation, communication, empathy, and conflict resolution by giving them an opportunity to work together towards a common goal. These games require the skills of everyone in a family, not just one or two members. Contrast this with traditional games, in which there is a direct competition between individuals or groups, and you’ll see why cooperative games can play such a big role in teaching and reinforcing peacemaking skills.

Peacemaking is about relationships. If you can help your children build and sustain supportive relationships, they will be able to practice and promote peacemaking more effectively. The best way to promote the ability to form such relationships is through practice, which can be difficult. Cooperative games are a way to the skills of relationships—skills such as communication, trust, problem solving, empathy, and cooperation—in a what is FUN, engaging, and real.

Cooperative games are a FUN way to improve your family’s communication skills, inspire cooperation, and build a strong sense of family.
